OJK's Recent Updates on the Shares Buyback Mechanism of a Public Company

Introduction

The Indonesian Financial Services Authority (OJK) has updated the rules for how a public company (Company) can buyback their shares. These new rules are outlined in OJK Regulation Number 29 of 2023 (OJKR 29/2023), which replaces the older OJK Regulation Number 30 of 2017 (OJKR 30/2017). The new regulation took effect on 29 December 2023.

OJK found that the old rules were difficult to apply, especially concerning setting the price for buybacks, the timing and process for transferring the bought-back shares (known as treasury shares), and the requirements for sharing information about the buybacks.

The new regulation, OJKR 29/2023, is not entirely new but it does make some important changes to tighten up the rules around how companies can buyback their shares. Here are the main changes from the old regulation to the new one:

- Key amendments: The document lists the significant changes made to the previous regulation.
- New provisions: It also introduces new rules that companies need to follow.

II. New provisions under OJKR 29/2023

1. The requirement to disclose the buyback source of funds

OJKR 29/2023 requires the Company to disclose the source of funds to conduct the buyback. This disclosure is in addition to other disclosure materials, as under the previous requirements stipulated by OJKR 30/2017 (e.g. buyback timeline, estimated price, method, and management's analysis). It shall be disclosed at the same time as the announcement date of the Company's GMS.

The Company shall ensure that the source of funds fulfils the following requirements:

- a. it does not significantly affect the Company's financial ability to fulfil the obligation that is about to be due, e.g. with the current ratio, calculated from the current asset divided by the short-term liabilities, more than 110% according to the recent and publicly available financial report;
- b. it uses the internal funds of the Company, e.g. from its business activity;
- c. it is not a fund resulting from any public offering; and
- d. it is not a fund sourced from any form of loan and/or debt.

The above-mentioned requirements shall also apply in terms of buyback caused by a significantly fluctuating market condition.

2. Possible discontinuation of the buyback

- a. Early discontinuation due to the Company's decision: OJKR 29/2023 opens a new possibility for a Company to discontinue the buyback process early, before the end of the actual completion period. The Company shall submit to OJK and announce to the public the relevant information relating to such discontinuation, accompanied with the relevant reasoning, by at the latest two working days after it is decided by the Company's board of directors to discontinue the buyback process.
- b. Early discontinuation due to a significantly fluctuating market condition: If the buyback period is not yet completed during a significantly fluctuating market condition, the Company shall discontinue the buyback process, and subsequently submit to OJK and announce to the public the relevant information relating to such discontinuation, accompanied with the relevant reasoning, by at the latest two working days after the decision to discontinue the buyback process.

3. Restriction to conduct buyback in conjunction with the buyback of shares during significantly fluctuating market conditions

The buyback is prohibited from being carried out simultaneously with the implementation of the share buyback during significantly fluctuating market conditions, as referred to in OJK Regulation Number 13 of 2023 concerning Policies to Maintain the Performance and Stability of the Capital Market under Significantly Fluctuating Market Conditions (OJKR 13/2023).

In the event that the Company conducts a share buyback under OJKR 13/2023 before the completion of the buyback based on OJKR 29/2023, the Company shall discontinue the implementation of the buyback and perform the disclosure as referred to in point 2 above.

III. Things to note

The new regulation by the OJK is designed to ensure that the process of the Company buying back its shares is transparent and well-regulated, safeguarding the interests of public shareholders. It also legalises the share transfer methods that have been used in practice without formal legal backing. The regulation allows the Company more ways to manage its treasury shares, such as through acquisitions, and clarifies the rules and timelines for these transactions.

Despite the regulation introducing more requirements, there does not seem to be any negative impact on the market's willingness to carry out share buybacks. Our desktop research shows that at least three public companies have planned buybacks since the regulation was put into place.

Furthermore, the regulation gives clarity to public companies that had already received approval from their GMS to buyback shares or were in the process of transferring treasury shares before the regulation started. They can continue with their buyback plans according to the previous regulation, OJKR 30/2017.
